ADRIAN JOHN OLIVER

POOLE

Adrian John Oliver has had a varied career including retail sales, bank clerk, bookkeeping, office management, natural therapies and a four-year term as a Green Party councillor in London. Adrian lives in Parkstone, has five generations of family living locally and attended Poole Grammar School.

'The nature of politics in this country is changing. The theory of trickle-down economics has been discredited. Our current system is creating a flow of wealth from the poorest and the middle classes up to the super rich. Solvable problems, such as the decades-long lack of affordable housing, have not been tackled because of a lack of political will. The result is ever greater disillusionment with politics in general and the other major parties in particular. Fundamentally, they share and further the same exploitative corporate agenda, putting profit before people and the planet.

At its best, politics is about creating the change we want to see in our society - improving quality of life for all, not just a few. This is the focus of the Green Party, and the reason why I joined it. Blind policy surveys have consistently shown that our policies are the most popular and increasingly, people are realising that the Green Party is the way forward. Last year local people helped elect the first Green Party MEP for the South West, Molly Scott Cato (pictured) and in January more than 20,000 people joined the Green Party. Let's create the Green government we deserve.'

ELECTION COMMUNICATION

Imagine a political system that puts the public first. Imagine an economy that gives everyone their fair share. Imagine a society capable of supporting everyone's needs. Imagine a planet protected from the threat of climate change now and for the generations to come.

That's the future we want to create and we believe we have the means to do it. Green Party membership is soaring and more and more people are recognising that the politics of the future doesn't have to look like the politics of the past.

Vote Green and you can help us build a society that works for the Common Good."
